Summary

Collection Title:

Pauline Bart papers, 1925-2015

Creator:

Bart, Pauline

Abstract:

Pauline Bart was a feminist sociologist who researched and wrote about many feminist and gender-related civil rights issues: topics included pornography, sexual assault prevention and rape law reform, Jewish and middle-aged women's mental health issues, reproductive rights and Chicago's Jane Collective, and violence against women. Her papers consist of her writings, teaching materials, research files, professional activities, as well as personal and family history materials. Acquired as part of the Sallie Bingham Center for Women's History and Culture.

Background

Scope and Content

The Pauline Bart papers consist of her writings, including drafts and copies of reviews, articles and books; drafts of Bart's book, Stopping Rape: Successful Survival Strategies, and other papers related to the book's publication; drafts and published copies of articles and academic papers written by Bart; and other materials related to her writings, including book contracts, reprint requests, and reviews of her work. The papers also contain teaching materials related to classes taught by Bart at the University of Illinois in Chicago, the University of California at Los Angeles, and other institutions. Materials include syllabi, lists and copies of course readings, student papers, and other papers. Research materials include interview transcripts, content analysis, and other papers related to the Jane Collective, which Bart researched for her article "Seizing the Means of Reproduction: An Illegal Feminist Abortion Collective - How and Why it Worked;" materials related to Stopping Rape: Successful Survival Strategies, including transcripts of interviews with 94 survivors of sexual assault or attempted rape, notebooks containing content analysis of the interviews, grant applications and drafts, Viva rape questionnaires, and other papers; interview transcripts and other papers related to a study of depression; and other research files on topics such as pornography, depression, violence against women, the Illinois sexual assault statute, feminism, rape, and homosexuality. There are materials related to conferences Bart attended and papers presented, as well as professional correspondence. Personal materials include correspondence, notebooks, diaries, and maternal family history, including three boxes of writings by Bart's mother, Mildred Lackow.

Biographical/Historical

Pauline Bart was a feminist sociologist known for her teaching, research, and writing. From the 1960s to the 1990s, she addressed many feminist and gender-related civil rights issues, and her research topics included pornography, sexual assault prevention and rape law reform, Jewish and middle-aged women's mental health issues, reproductive rights and Chicago's Jane Collective, and violence against women.

Born in Brooklyn in 1930, Bart received her Ph.D. in sociology from the University of California at Los Angeles in 1967. After struggling to find a long-term position for several years, she became a professor at the University of Illinois Chicago, where she remained from 1970-1992. Bart experienced a turbulent relationship with UIC administrators throughout her time there, and as she rose through the ranks of professorship to achieve tenure, she struggled to attain salary equity with her male counterparts. In 1992, Bart was involved in a controversy that resulted in her leaving UIC. Bart then served as a lecturer at the University of California at Los Angeles before retiring from full-time teaching in 1995. She continued her writing, research, professional activities, and teaching gigs into her later years. Bart died in North Carolina in 2021.

Bart published many articles as well as the books The Student Sociologist's Handbook (1971), Stopping Rape: Successful Survival Strategies (1985), and Violence Against Women: The Bloody Footprints (1993). She is credited with being one of the first scholars to research the ways gender biases harm women.

She is also remembered for her wit and for the way her professional life was informed by her personal history.

Stopping Rape: Successful Survival Strategies, 1977-1993

Scope and Contents

This subseries contains drafts of Stopping Rape: Successful Survival Strategies, a book Bart co-authored with Patricia H. O'Brien, and other papers related to the book's publication. Published in 1985, Stopping Rape expanded upon research Bart conducted in 1977, when she interviewed 94 survivors of rape or attempted rape in order to generate a list of survival strategies. In addition to chapter drafts, this subseries also includes advertising and publicity related to the book's publication and the underlying research study.

Scope and Contents

The Articles and Academic Paper Subseries contains drafts and printed copies of published and unpublished academic articles and papers written or co-authored by Bart, as well as correspondence, publication information, and other papers related to some articles. Included in this series are drafts and copies of some of Bart's more notable works, including "Portnoy's Mother's Complaint," which grew from Bart's research on depression for her dissertation, "Depression in Middle-Aged Women;" "The Battered Data Syndrome," an article on interpersonal violence and spousal abuse co-authored by Bart, Elizabeth H. Pleck, Joseph H. Pleck, and Marlyn Grossman in response to Suzanne K. Steinmetz's research on battered husbands; "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Orifice," an article about sexist language in gynecology textbooks co-authored by Bart and Diana Scully, and "Seizing the Means of Reproduction," the product of Bart's research on the Jane Collective, a feminist underground abortion service in Chicago in the early 1970s.

Jane Collective Research , 1969-1990

Scope and Contents

The Jane Collective Research Subseries contains papers related to Bart's research on the Abortion Counseling Service of Women's Liberation, also known as the Jane Collective, a feminist underground abortion service operating in Chicago, Illinois from 1969-1973. Founded by University of Chicago student Heather Booth, the Jane Collective provided more than 11,000 women with abortions and abortion counseling prior to abortion being legalized by Roe v. Wade in 1973.

Bart interviewed members of the Jane Collective in pursuit of her article, "Seizing the Means of Reproduction." The materials in this subseries include interview transcripts, Bart's content analysis and notes on the interviews, drafts and draft fragments of "Seizing the Means of Reproduction," and some correspondence. Some interviews also include audio recordings. See the Audiotapes Series for more information.

Personal Files , 1925-2008

Scope and Contents

The Personal Files Series contains correspondence, appointment books, diaries, peer-reviewed manuscripts for which Bart served as a referee, and other material related to Bart's personal and professional life, including papers related to her struggles to achieve salary equity and documentation of the 1992 controversy which led to her leaving the University of Illinois Chicago. There are three boxes of material documenting the life of Bart's mother, Mildred Lackow. Her memoir begins in 1915 and describes growing up in a Russian shtetl and emigrating to the U.S. Also included are personal essays and Bart's poetry.

Correspondence, Personal and Professional , 1960-2008

Scope and Contents

The Correspondence Subseries includes Bart's personal and professional correspondence. Much of the correspondence relates to Bart's plans to travel to conferences or universities to lecture about her research. There are also letters from sociologists, professors, and other scholars requesting copies of Bart's writings or more information on her research. There is very little family correspondence.

While most of the correspondence in this subseries is professional in nature, personal correspondence reflects the turbulent relationships among members of the feminist movement throughout the second half of the 20th century. As the movement expanded, feminists often disagreed with each other on various issues, and these disagreements can be seen in several volatile exchanges in this subseries, in which Bart was either directly or tangentially involved. Some of Bart's more frequent correspondents include feminists such as Catherine MacKinnon, Andrea Dworkin, and Phyllis Chelser.

Particularly in the late 1980s and early 1990s, Bart struggled with her own feminist identity, and she felt as though feminism was generally becoming more conservative while she was becoming more radical. During this time, Bart also struggled with her feelings regarding her own sexuality and her relationships with women, depression, and thoughts of suicide, all of which are reflected in her personal correspondence.

Notebooks and Diaries , 1941-2007

Scope and Contents

The Notebooks and Diaries Subseries contains Bart's address book, appointment books, autograph albums, diaries, and a notebook. The two autograph albums in this subseries were compiled during Bart's time at P.S. 235 and Winthrop Junior High School in Brooklyn, New York. Bart kept diaries regularly from childhood throughout her adult life. The diaries' contents are often varied and irregular, including dated entries as well as notes from presentation, phone numbers, and reminders. Bart frequently recorded her dreams.

Lackow Family Materials, 1925-1999

Scope and Contents

These materials document the Lackow family, chiefly Pauline Bart's mother, Mildred Lackow (1902-1997). Lackow wrote a lengthy unpublished memoir that begins in 1915 and ends in the 1980s. It describes growing up on a Russian shtetl, living through WWI, emigrating to the U.S., settling in Brooklyn, and raising her family. Also included in these materials are personal and business correspondence, travel diaries, and research on current events, Watergate, and the Holocaust.
