Collection Title:

Center for International Policy records, 1960-2020 and undated; 1960-ongoing

Creator:

Center for International Policy (Washington, D.C.)

Source:

Human Rights Archive (Duke University)

Abstract:

Non-profit organization founded in 1975, based in Washington, DC, whose chief focus is promoting changes in U.S. foreign and military policy in support of global human rights. The records of the Center for International Policy (CIP) span the years 1960 to 2016, and document in detail the organization's global activities in support of human rights as well as its internal administration, funding, and public relations outreach. CIP's chief areas of interest lie in United States foreign and military policies, including the activities of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). Topics include human rights issues, U.S. relations with Central and South America, demilitarization, nuclear weapons, the Cuban trade embargo, money laundering and other aspects of international finance, terrorism, and the narcotics trade. The bulk of the files take the form of administrative files and records which contain correspondence, memos, data, reports, travel documents, and extensive files on other organizations; there are also many files of printed materials such as pamphlets, newsletters, and press releases.

Background

Scope and Content

The records of the Center for International Policy (CIP) span the years 1960 to 2020 (and continue to accrue as of 2022), and document in detail the organization's global activities in support of human rights as well as its internal administration, funding, and public relations outreach. CIP's chief areas of interest lie in documenting and reforming United States foreign and military policies, including the activities of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). Specific topics covered by materials in the collection include U.S. relations with Central and South America, particularly with Colombia, El Salvador, Haiti, and Cuba; U.S. relations with South and East Asia, particularly the Korean Peninsula; demilitarization in areas of conflict; nuclear weapons and the arms race; the Cuban trade embargo; money laundering and other aspects of international finance; terrorism in various countries; and the narcotics trade. The bulk of the files take the form of administrative files and records on other organizations which contain correspondence, memos, data, reports, travel documents, and extensive files; there are also many files containing printed materials such as pamphlets, newsletters, and press releases.

The CIP records are arranged in the following series: Development Files Series; Printed Materials Series; Oversize Materials Series; Robert White Papers Series; Adam Isacson Papers Series; Selig Harrison Papers Series; Wayne S. Smith Papers Series; Geographic, Subject, and Program Files Series; and Audiovisual Materials Series.

White's and Isacson's files retain their original arrangement into groups such as correspondence (some in digital form), research and subject files, speeches, and travel documentation. Harrison's files retain their original arrangement by region, such South and West Asia, East Asia and North Korea, while some materials have been removed to the Nuclear and Energy Subseries. The research files claim the largest proportion of the files for all individuals, and contain documentation on other organizations, individuals, and extensive information in particular on Central and South America and Asia. Other countries represented in the collection files to a lesser extent include Russia, Israel, Cuba and other countries surrounding the South and East Asia regions. Correspondence files are present throughout the collection, and include key individuals such as Iowa Senator Tom Harkin; Peter Dale Scott, former Canadian ambassador and political commentator; and Harrison Selig, Director of the Asia Program. Many other well-known politicians and activists are represented in smaller folders of materials; there are also a small number of

Guide to the Center for International Policy Records, 1960-2016 and undated; 1960-ongoing administrative files related to internal staff members and board members. The development files reveal the nature of the CIP's fundraising activities, and the extent of support from charitable organizations; the most extensive files belong to the Ford Foundation, General Service Foundation, International Center for Development Policy, and the MacArthur Foundation; smaller files represent many other similar institutions.

Collection acquired as part of the Human Rights Archive.

Biographical/Historical

The Center for International Policy (CIP), a non-governmental non-profit organization, was founded in 1975 primarily in response to the Vietnam War, and is currently (2007) based in Washington D.C. Its mission is to reform the activities of United States foreign and military policies in support of human rights in all countries. The records housed at Duke correspond to three important CIP associates: Robert White, Adam Issacson and Selig Harrison.

Robert White was hired as president of the Center for International Policy (CIP) in 1989 and served until his death in 2015. Prior to joining the CIP, White spent twenty-five years in the Foreign Service, specializing in Latin American affairs with a particular emphasis on Central America. Among the posts he held were Latin America Director of the Peace Corps, Deputy Permanent Representative to the Organization of American States, Ambassador to Paraguay and to El Salvador. After retiring from the Foreign Service in 1981, White served as a Senior Associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. During his tenure at the CIP, he presided at conferences and led delegations to several Latin American and Caribbean countries, published numerous studies of U.S. policy toward the region, and led an ongoing effort to reform U.S. intelligence agencies.

The CIP's Programs Director, Adam Isacson, was hired as program director for the Colombia and Demilitarization of Latin American program in 1995. Prior to that he worked for the Arias Foundation for Peace and Human Progress in San José, Costa Rica. Mr. Isacson has worked on Latin American security issues, particularly U.S. policy toward Central America and Colombia. He has been to Colombia more than twenty-five times and visited thirteen of the country's thirty-two departments.

The CIP's director of the Asia Project, Selig Harrison, is a senior scholar of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and director of the Century Foundation's Program on the United States and the Future of Korea. He has specialized in South Asia and East Asia for fifty years as a journalist and scholar, including as a South Asia correspondent of the Associated Press. Selig Harrison became one of the first Americans to visit North Korea since the Korean War and to interview Kim Il Sung in 1972.

Selig Harrison Papers, 1960-2011 and undated

Scope and Contents note

Accession (2012-0074) contains papers of Selig Harrison, a senior associate and program director of the Asia Project for the Center for International Policy. He is also a senior scholar of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and director of the Century Foundation's Program on the United States and the Future of Korea. He has specialized in South Asia and East Asia for fifty years as a journalist and scholar, including as a South Asia correspondent of the Associated Press. Selig Harrison became one of the first Americans to visit North Korea since the Korean War and to interview Kim Il Sung in 1972. Harrison's papers are divided into three subseries: Geographic (the largest section), Nuclear and Energy, and Professional. Additional materials from Selig Harrison can be found in the Audiovisual Materials Series.

Geographic Subseries, 1960-2011 and undated

Scope and Contents note

Consists of business-related exchanges between Harrison and various correspondents; newspaper clippings and other current events material regarding the economy and politics of Asian countries, including the tensions and relations in and between these countries; travel documents; and drafts of articles and speeches. Files are arranged first by region, including South and West Asia, East Asia, North Korea, and interregional and other regions, and then alphabetically by name. Some materials have been removed to the Nuclear and Energy Subseries, the Professional Subseries and the Audiovisual Subseries. Materials dealing exclusively with North Korea have been removed to the North Korea Subseries.

Program, Subject, and Geographic Files, 1980s-2010s

Scope and Contents

This series contains an array of documentation created by and collected by CIP program staff in support of various initiatives including promotion of democracy in Latin America, anti-corruption programs, anti-landmine programs and policies, and environmental protection policies. Programs represented include the CIP Central America Program (and its director, Elsa Chang), the Democracy without Borders project in Honduras; country programs in Nicaragua, Guatemala, and Colombia; and many files from various organizations working with CIP in political or fundraising partnerships. Also includes drafts of the CIP report "Commander in Chief", discussing the role of the American president in international treaties over landmines and chemical weapons. Materials are loosely arranged by topic and are described at the box level.

Colombia, 2000s Box 107
Box 94

Scope and Contents

CIP research files and collected information for Colombia briefing book; some correspondence and draft proposals for a meeting between US and FARC officials in the 2000s; Victims of the Armed Conflict project files (Medellin); CIP Colombia policy drafts and statements.

El Salvador, 1980s-2008 Box 102
Box 103

Scope and Contents

CIP agency files regarding conditions and politics in El Salvador, collected and created by CIP staff. Includes materials from El Marcha, 2007-2008; CIP's Blue Democracy project (Democracia Azul), 2007-2008; and files from Robert White regarding El Salvador and his ambassadorship there, 2002-2007. Some of the Robert White material relates to a book draft, proposed and researched about White's time in El Salvador. Also includes a substantial amount of photocopied and gathered reports, declassified telegrams and other archival documents, and press releases regarding 1980s El Salvadorian death squads; includes materials collected about the murders of four U.S. churchwomen and subsequent investigations and trials.

Fundacion Democracia sin Fronteras (FDsF) /
Democracy without Borders: Administration and reports, 2005-2008

Box 104
Box 112

Scope and Contents

Includes administrative, funding, and logistical files from various meetings held by FDsF, as well as a briefing book and revised constitution from the founding of the NGO by CIP. Contains some scattered annual reports and media coverage. Programs mentioned include the FDsF inauguration, held in Honduras in 2006, as well as the Mateo city program and the Transparency and Access to Information program.

Honduras, 2000-2007

Box 105
Box 111

Scope and Contents

Files related to CIP activities in Honduras, particularly regarding violence stemming from illegal logging and deforestation. Includes some FDsF materials, as well as research and documentation of negotiations and confrontations between loggers and the military in Olancho versus the MAO (Olancho's Environmental Movement) and other civilians. Includes materials researching the death of anti-logging activist Carlos Reyes. CIP staff represented include Adam Isaacson, Elsa Chang, and Robert White, among others. There is also extensive material from the CIP-sponsored Marcha Nacional por la Vida, held in June 2004 to protest deforestation in Honduras, as well as material documenting the at-times contentious relationship between CIP and EIA (Environmental Investigation Agency). Some other topics represented by subject files include CAFTA (Central America Free Trade Agreement), mining, corruption, the 2005 election, and human rights in Honduras.
