Background

Scope and Content

The Kenneth Hubbard Collection of Presidential Campaign Ephemera consists of printed and artifactual memorabilia from assorted United States presidential campaigns, dating largely from the late nineteenth century through the present. Items are chiefly relating to the Democratic and Republican political parties, with some materials from the U.S. Socialist Party, the Prohibitionist Party, the Libertarian Party, and other third parties. The majority of the collection consists of buttons, pins, and campaign literature such as pamphlets, newsletters, flyers, and platforms. There are also speech transcripts from appearances by John F. Kennedy and Adlai Stevenson during their presidential campaigns.

Biographical/Historical

Kenneth Hubbard (1942-) is an avid collector of U.S. presidential campaign ephemera. He graduated with a B.A. in history from Duke University in 1965. He is a former Executive Vice President/CEO of Hines, a real estate and investing firm. He has also served on the Duke University Board of Trustees.

Arrangement

Materials are presented here by election year and candidate. Some candidates who ran for office several times have buttons or pins that cannot be dated to a precise election year. These items are listed in the "Material from undetermined campaigns" series, and they are arranged by candidate name.
