Background

Scope and Content

The Radical and Labor Pamphlets Collection spans the years from 1896 to 1977, with the bulk of the dates falling between 1911 and 1954, and is made up of publications relating to communism, socialism, and other left-wing movements, as well as to labor parties and trade unions. Subjects represented are: the Communist Party in the U.S. and Great Britain; socialism in the U.S. and other countries; radical youth organizations; political trials and persecutions of radical activists; labor organizations; anti-fascist and pacifist movements; anarchist organizations; anti-Communist propaganda; Soviet propaganda; and Soviet-Western relations. Other significant topics include economic justice, electoral campaigns, human rights issues, the role of women and youth in activist movements, unemployment, housing, fascism in Spain, and other contemporary war issues.

There are many individual authors represented in this collection, including Israel Amter, Arthur Clegg, Georgi Dimitrov, Emma Goldman, Gilbert Green, Grace Hutchins, Mikhail Ivanovich Kalinin, Corliss Lamont, Clare Booth Luce, Philip Murray, Harry Pollitt, Karl Radek, Iosif Stalin, Lev Trotskii, and others. Many pamphlets were produced anonymously under the aegis of institutions: these include the Communist Party, USA, Socialist Labor Party, Young Communist League, International Labor Defense, Civil Rights Congress, Communist International, Congress of Industrial Organizations, Farmer's Labor Unions, American Federation of Labor, Friends of the Soviet Union, and others.

The majority of the pamphlets are arranged by subject categories, with the largest groups relating to the activities and membership of the Communist and Socialist parties. There is a small group of pamphlets chiefly made up of radical and labor song collections from 1912 to 1950. The majority of the pamphlets were produced in the United States and Great Britain, but there are also smaller groups of materials from Russia, India, Australia, Canada, China, Ireland, Italy, Brazil, the Philippines, and Mexico.

This collection also includes pamphlets published in the 1960s and 1970s, which address topics such as Marxism, gender studies, feminism, Black power, racism, Vietnam, China, anti-capitalism, political economy, and labor studies. Most of these pamphlets, which were acquired at a later time than the bulk of the collection, are arranged by publisher, then alphabetically by title. Individuals and groups in these materials include Angela Davis, the Black Panthers, Simone de Beauvoir, John Watson, Chris Milton, the AFL-CIO, the Steelworkers Union, New England Free Press, and others.
