Background

Scope and Content

This collection covers nearly all aspects of Samuelson's long career. Materials are arranged in the original order maintained by Samuelson, and include his professional correspondence files; unpublished writings, notes, drafts and fragments; audiovisual materials; documents regarding awards, including the Nobel Prize; files relating to various grants, committees, and projects; teaching materials from his years at MIT; files of speeches; and publication files, including professional and mainstream media articles. Significant correspondents include Milton Friedman, Don Patinkin, and Robert Solow, as well as many other notable economists, Nobel prize winners, politicians, and scientists. Material can also be found on economic programs at institutions such as MIT, where Samuelson established a renowned economics faculty. Researchers will find materials representing Samuelson's work on diverse topics of economic theory, including the history of economic thought (post-Keynesian economics, neoclassical economics, and thinkers such as Marx, Sraffa, and Ricardo), financial economics, growth theory, international finance, inflation, stability, welfare economics, post-World War economic policies and stabilization, stochastic analysis, utility, monetary policy, Marxist economics, biological economics (including population and gender studies), thermodynamics, and mathematical economics. Samuelson's insights on many of these subjects serve as organizational themes for large sections in the Unpublished Writings series. Finally, the Samuelson papers also document his strong contributions to the US government, especially his work for the Federal Reserve, and to federally-funded projects, professional committees and boards, and organizations and societies, beginning in the 1940s and continuing throughout his career.

The Correspondence series spans Samuelson's entire career, beginning in the 1930s. It consists mainly of professional exchanges with his colleagues in the US and other countries. There are also files of correspondence with a wide variety of political and academic figures, presses, and media organizations. There is frequent correspondence with President Kennedy, for whom he was an economic advisor. Besides the named folders that represent notable economists such as Milton Friedman, John Kenneth Galbraith, Franco Modigliani, Don Patinkin, and Robert Solow, there are general correspondence folders in which a variety of documents are chronologically arranged. There is also a large group of files relating to the publication of his textbooks. Additional correspondence can be found in almost all the other series.

A large series of Unpublished Writings contains many folders of unpublished articles, extensive research notes, jotted-down insights, and other fragmentary writings. The earliest pieces appear to be a typescript of Samuelson's 1933 diary and writings on collective bargaining (1933-1934). The wide range of topics in economic theory as well as the history of economics reflects Samuelson's interests over many decades, beginning with his work on Marx and the Transformation Problem, and later on, focusing more specifically on financial economics. The unpublished writings also reveal that he also wrote extensively on population and gender studies, thermodynamics, and mathematics.

The equally large Printed Material series houses a nearly complete collection of Samuelson's published articles in addition to a few of his monographs. In some cases, article folders include extensive correspondence between Samuelson and his editors and publishers. Located in this series is a copy of the thesis that Samuelson wrote while he was at Harvard University, which in 1947 was published as the well-known Foundations of Economic Analysis. Also present in this series are the many columns and articles he wrote for Newsweek in the 1960s and 1970s.

Other aspects of Samuelson's career can be found in course files that form the Teaching series, most of which contain reading lists and syllabi, and in the Committees and Projects series, which contains information on his many consultancy roles, grant-funded projects, and professional service. Examples include projects for the Radiation Laboratory and the Rand Corporation, and contributions to government agencies such as the US War Production Board and the Federal Reserve Board, as well as academic organizations such as the National Science Foundation, the National Academy of Science, and the Econometric Society.

The smallest series of the collection, the Awards series contains materials relating to Samuelson's Nobel Prize in Economics in 1970 and his Medal of Science award in 1996, as well as several honorary doctorates that he received. Files contain congratulatory letters and telegrams and his outgoing correspondence to subsequent Nobel Prize winners. In contrast to this small series, the large Speeches and Interviews series houses paper drafts or transcripts of nearly all of Samuelson's public presentations, amounting to over 400 lectures, speeches, and interviews. Some of these can also be found on recorded media in the Audiovisual Material series.

The Audiovisual Material series features 320 cassettes from the commercially produced "Economics Cassettes Series," a set of interviews with Milton Friedman and Paul Samuelson on economics issues of the times. There are also a few tapes and cassettes of lectures and speeches by Samuelson. Items related to the topics and events represented in this series are also found in the Teaching, Speeches and Interviews, and Awards series. There is a DVD recording of the 2010 MIT memorial service which provides many images of Samuelson taken throughout his life, filling in for the absence of photographs in the collection.

Scope and Contents

Chiefly made up of two sets of the "Economics Cassette Series" produced by Instructional Dynamics Incorporated (IDI) between 1968 and 1977, this series contains 191 audiocassettes featuring interviews with Paul Samuelson and 125 audiocassettes featuring interviews with Milton Friedman, discussing fiscal policy and other issues through their respective lenses of Keynesian and Monetarist economics. Many of the Friedman interviews listed here have been digitized by the Hoover Institution at Stanford University and may be accessed online through their website on Friedman: <https://miltonfriedman.hoover.org/groups/formats/category/Sound%20Recording>.

This series also includes other audiovisual material, such as open-reel audio tapes of two of Samuelson's lectures, a video response to a 1975 video lecture by Samuelson from a group of German students at the University of Cologne, and a film reel of Samuelson winning the Nobel Prize.

Correspondence, 1935-2010

Scope and Contents

Organized into two subseries: Correspondence with Individuals and Organizations and Correspondence Related to Textbooks and Other Publications.

Correspondence with Individuals and Organizations, 1935-2010 and undated

Scope and Contents

Includes Samuelson's professional correspondence not only with economists, but with organizations and professionals in other domains, including political figures such as Presidents John F. Kennedy, Jimmy Carter, and Bill Clinton. There are many notable economists represented in the series, including Sir John Hicks, Frank Knight, Peter Bernstein, John Chipman, Don Patinkin, Milton Friedman, Franco Modigliani, and others. Scholars from other disciplines, among them Noam Chomsky and Alfred J. Lotka, are also present. Correspondence ranges from letters in the 1930s by Hicks and Knight to posthumous correspondence on special journal issues about Samuelson's life and work. Prolific correspondents include Bernstein, Chipman, and Patinkin.

Along with letters, some files contain drafts of articles or research, usually with Samuelson's enclosed comments or feedback; one of the earliest documents is a 1935 exam given in Jacob Viner's economics course at the University of Chicago. Other files include correspondence by several authors on specific subjects such as "Latane, Tobin and Markowitz on risk and uncertainty in portfolio management." There are also files containing documents related to particular organizations, publication, and countries or regions, such as China, India, Korea, and South America.

Arranged alphabetically. Each letter group begins with general correspondence folders, followed by folders labeled either by correspondent, institution, topic, group, or region.

Scope and Contents

Contains a near-complete collection of Samuelson's published writings, chiefly in article form. Organized into four subseries: Articles (published in magazines and newspapers), Books, Publications, and Newspaper Clippings. The Publications and Newspaper Clippings subseries are arranged in the original order maintained by Samuelson. A complete bibliography of his publications, including Newsweek articles, is available by request, but some titles listed may not be present in the collection.

Articles, 1966-1981

Scope and Contents

Includes original and photocopied articles written by Samuelson (and translated into Portuguese) for Homen, a Brazilian magazine; as well as articles for Newsweek, a regular column that he shared with economists Milton Friedman and Henry Wallich. Some files also include reader feedback or other items.

A list of Samuelson's Newsweek columns titles and dates of publication is available by request.

Scope and Contents

Includes published copies of Samuelson's articles, interviews, and speeches, arranged chronologically in numerical order. Content in folders vary: some folders contain only a clipping of a newspaper article mentioning Samuelson or his work, while other folders include extensive correspondence between Samuelson and periodical editors regarding an article he submitted for publication. There is a small amount of audiovisual material, such as cassette tapes. There is some overlap with the Articles subseries and with the Speeches and Interviews series.

A complete list of Samuelson's publications is available by request. Although the list is complete, not every publication is present in the collection. Also, some list numbers have been skipped.

Speeches and Interviews, 1980-2009

Access Restrictions:

Access note. Some materials are fragile audiovisual/photographic formats that may need to be reformatted before use. Contact Research Services for access.

Scope and Contents

Material related to Samuelson's public speeches, magazine interviews, and other events. Common themes are the global economy, Keynesian economics, inflation, debt, and political influences on economics (including his thoughts on various leaders such as Presidents Bush and Clinton). Many interviews are with foreign magazines or news stations, and have been translated into Spanish, Italian, Japanese, and other languages; these frequently include Samuelson's thoughts on the economics of the host country. Other speeches are much more personal, including his remarks at family events, reunions, birthday parties, and funerals.

There are 30 subseries, one per year. The type of material varies: files may include correspondence between the inviting organization and Samuelson, Samuelson's script from the event, official transcripts (some edited) of the speech or interview, published accounts or news clippings from the event, and other ephemera. Some files also include audiovisual material.

Several recordings of Samuelson's public presentations, possibly including versions of speeches in this series, can be found in the Audiovisual Material series.

Unpublished Writings, 1933-2009

Scope and Contents

Samuelson's unpublished and unfinished writings make up the majority of the series. To allow for better access, these unorganized files were sorted into fifteen topical groups: Economic Policy, Financial Economics, Growth Theory, History of Economic Thought, International Economics, Macroeconomics, Marx, Mathematical Economics, Population and Gender, Public Economics, David Ricardo, Piero Sraffa, Stochastic Theory, Thermodynamics, and Welfare Economics. Finally, there is a remaining group of uncategorized folders of unpublished writings, then two boxes of notes and fragmentary writings.

Jotted down on notepads and paper sheets and frequently informal in tone, these unpublished writings reflect Samuelson's interest, manifested throughout his career, in multiple areas of scientific and historical thought. The most prolific output relates to mathematics and mathematical economics. The history of economic thought also receives a great deal of attention from Samuelson, with extensive writings on classical and neoclassical economics and separate categories for his many notes and drafts on the economic thought of Karl Marx, David Ricardo, and Piero Sraffa. Samuelson contributed seminal work to the new field of biological economics, helping to shed light on sex ratios and population issues in economics, and this work is present in this series in the form of writings on population and gender and on Volterra and Lotka. The series ends with uncategorized unpublished writings on a variety of issues ranging from capitalism and utility analysis, to comments on published articles by other economists.
