Summary

Collection Title:

James H. Semans papers, 1878-1955, bulk 1936-1953

Creator:

Semans, James H.

Abstract:

James Hustead Semans (1910-2005) was an American urologist and the second husband of Mary Duke Biddle Trent Semans. This collection documents the history of the Semans family of Uniontown, PA and his medical training and career, which involved stateside military service during World War II, private practice in Atlanta, GA, and teaching at Duke University. His clinical interests included medical rehabilitation and marriage counseling, and he was the creator of polylingual lecturing.

Background

Scope and Content

This collection contains correspondence, financial and legal records, writings and speeches, scrapbooks and photographic prints, audio and video recordings, awards and certificates, calendars, and inscribed or autographed books related to the Semans family of Uniontown, PA, particularly James Hustead Semans. It documents his life prior to his 1953 marriage, as well as his medical training and career.

Biographical/Historical

James Husted Semans (1910-2005) was born on 30 May 1910 in Uniontown, PA to Virginia Belle Smith Semans (1866-1944) and Thomas Breckenridge Semans (1861-1941). He graduated from Lawrenceville School (NJ) in 1928, where he played violin in the orchestra and studied French, German, and Latin. He went on to earn an AB in pre-medical sciences from Princeton University in 1932 and an MD from Johns Hopkins University in 1936. He spent the summer of 1935 as a ward clerk at Notre Dame Bay Memorial Hospital in Newfoundland before becoming a medical resident at Johns Hopkins Hospital from 1936-1943 under Hugh H. Young in urology. His residency also took him to St. Mary's Hospital in Pierre, SD from 1938-1939, where he was under Theodore Riggs in general medicine and surgery, and Ancker Hospital in St. Paul, MN from 1941-1942, where he was under F. E. B. Foley in transurethral surgery. After his voluntary military service, he operated a private medical practice in Atlanta, GA from 1947-1953 and became involved in professional medical organizations. As a medical lecturer (which is how he met his wife in May 1953), he was the creator of polylingual lecturing. This is a labor-intensive lecture technique that involves learning how to deliver a lecture in a foreign language without learning the language as a whole or using a live translator.

Semans commitment to medical and vocational rehabilitation began while he was in the US Army Medical Corps from 1944-1946 at McGuire General Hospital in Richmond, VA then Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, TX. This developed into an interest in local, state, and national programs, especially after he came to Duke University as an Assistant Professor of Urology in 1953 and directed the hospital's rehabilitation program from 1957-1963 (he rose to Professor in 1960 and retired in 1980). He served in leadership roles with the United Medical Research Foundation of North Carolina (Founding President, 1955-1958), North Carolina Rehabilitation Association Executive Board (1955-1958), National Paraplegia Foundation (Vice President, 1955-1972), Operation Breakthrough Board of Directors (1965-1967), and the Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped (1962-1971). These activities brought him into contact with other figures in the field such as Mary Switzer and Howard Rusk, and he was named Mary Switzer Scholar at New York University in 1984.

Semans also supported the arts, with his primary institutional focus being the North Carolina School of the Arts (NCSA), where he was the first Chair of the Board of Trustees from 1964-1981 and Co-President of the Siena Summer Session beginning in 1967 (which became the International Music Program that ran through 2000). One of his main duties was the promotion of the institution and arts education, and he later sat on the North Carolina Arts Council (1982-?). He was a trustee of Louisburg (1969-?) and Warren Wilson (1977-?) colleges and a founding trustee of the Mary Duke Biddle Foundation (1960-2004; Chair, 1983-2004?), and he started the Mary Duke Biddle Trent Semans Foundation in 1982.

Semans awards include the National Conference of Christians and Jews National Brotherhood Award (1969), North Carolina Award for significant contributions to the arts (1972), and North Carolina Society Award (1986), all of which he received jointly with his wife Mary Duke Biddle Trent Semans (1920-2012). Together, they had four children: Jenny Lillian Semans (1954-2016), an unnamed child (1956-1956), James Duke Biddle Trent Semans (1957-2018), and Elizabeth Gotham Semans (born 1962).

Semans died on 21 April 2005 in Durham, and he is buried in Maplewood Cemetary next to his wife and three of his children.

Access Restrictions

This collection is currently being reprocessed to incorporate additional material before it becomes fully open to researchers in January 2027--material may sometimes be unavailable because of this. This work is being funded by a Duke Endowment grant focused on Duke family papers. For more information, please contact the Rubenstein Library.

Access restricted. Access to this material will be consistent with the 1991 agreement between Duke University Library, James H. Semans, and Mary Duke Biddle Trent Semans. Access to any correspondence, legal papers, and financial papers is restricted and will be permitted only with prior written permission, which should be sought from the chair of the board of the Mary Duke Biddle Foundation. This restriction shall be in place until 1 January 2027, after which all material shall be considered open for research.

Access note. One scrapbook includes patient information and photos and one box of index cards can be used to identify patients pictured in lantern slides. Contact Research Services for access.

Acquisition Information

The James H. Semans papers were received by the David M. Rubenstein Rare Book and Manuscript Library as a transfer from the Semans family papers in 2024. They were originally gifts from James H. and Mary Duke Biddle Trent Semans between 1969-1990.

Processing Information

This collection was originally a series in the former Semans family papers, which were processed by Madeleine Bagwell Perez and Donna Longo DiMichele, April 1991; encoded by Alvin Pollock; and updated by staff, 2009, 2010, 2016, 2017, Paula Jeannet, 2018, and Leah Tams, December 2021.

The Semans family papers were separated by series into four collections by Zachary Tumlin, February 2024, as part of a project funded by The Duke Endowment. He was subsequently aided by Will Clemmons, Kelley Slebos, and Zoe Finiasz.

Material described in the Semans family papers collection guide came from almost two dozen accessions from 1969-1990. Over three dozen additional accessions to the Semans family papers were received between 1992-2025. This collection guide could describe material from any of those accessions.

Collection Inventory

Correspondence, 1878-1953

Arranged chronologically.

Scope and Contents

Primarily James H. Semans' personal and professional correspondence, including with family and key figures in his medical training and career.

James carried on considerable correspondence with his parents during the 1930s-1940s and with his only sister Virginia and her husband Wendell A. Stone in the 1940s (who provided care for his aging parents). The letters describe family matters and James' academic, professional, and personal life, with many items having been written during his medical residency at Johns Hopkins Hospital (Baltimore, MD), which also took him to St. Mary's Hospital (Pierre, SD) and Ancker Hospital (St. Paul, MN), and his 31-months in the US Army Medical Corps during World War II at McGuire General Hospital (Richmond, VA) and Brooke Army Medical Center (San Antonio, TX). Of note is his correspondence with Hugh H. Young, whom he spent seven years under while at Hopkins. In a 1975 obituary for Young, James states that Young might have had the "greatest lasting influence" on his life of any one person.

In a series of letters to his parents from 1938-1939 while he was in Pierre, James describes his work and relationships with staff members at St. Mary's Hospital, his impressions of the community and residents (including American Indians), and the surrounding countryside. Of note are his descriptions of his supervisor Theodore E. Riggs, who's father and grandfather had been missionaries to the Dakota. Riggs is also mentioned in letters dated 31 March and 15 April 1944.

Beginning in 1946, the correspondence becomes majority professional and is between James and his medical colleagues. Much of it concerns the establishment of his private medical practice in Atlanta, GA, arrangements for professional meetings and organizations, and personnel references (there is also some correspondence with patients). Correspondence from the latter part of 1953 includes information on him becoming an Associate Professor of Urology at Duke University School of Medicine and his marriage to Mary Duke Biddle Trent.

Most of the earliest items (from the 1880s and early 1900s) are addressed to James' father Thomas B. Semans, a successful banker and businessman in Uniontown, PA. They relate to family matters and business investments, including a coal enterprise in New Zealand.

Polylingual Lecturing, 1962-1966

Language: Greek

Arranged chronologically.

Scope and Contents

Primarily audio recordings of at least three urological lectures in Greek and one in Hebrew, spoken by Semans and Procope Costas, Professor of Classics at Brooklyn College, on 10 and 12-inch phonodiscs. It is likely that these are demonstrations by Costas and practice sessions by Semans. Some of these discs were sent by Peter Mack of Nola Studios and the translation into Hebrew was possibly done by Menahem Mansoor, Professor of Hebrew and Semitic Studies at the University of Wisconsin.
