Abstract:

Earl Dotter is a documentarian, photojournalist, and labor activist based in Maryland. Dotter's great-grandfather, Charles G. A. Thamm, also worked as a photographer in Pennsylvania and was employed by the Landreth Seed Catalog Company. This collection contains photographs in various formats - including negatives and prints - created by Thamm and his family in the 1890s and early 1900s. It also contains digital surrogate images of Thamm's work, adjusted by Dotter.

Background

Scope and Content

Collection consists of Earl Dotter's collection of Charles G. A. Thamm's photographs, consisting of glass plate negatives, prints, albums, and some ephemera, as well as Dotter's raw and restored digital images of those photographs.

Thamm's photographs often depict his family, their friends, and his workplace, the Landreth Seed Catalog Company. Thamm's photographs of Landreth Seed Company include images of the Landreth family at home on the Bloomsdale Seed Farm, as well as the labor of factory workers and farm workers harvesting and packaging seeds in Bristol, Pennsylvania.

Thamm's images also include Civil War veteran reunions, such as the Grand Army of the Republic's 33rd encampment and parade in Philadelphia; Grant's cabin in Fairmount Park; and naval ships from the Great White Fleet on the Delaware River in 1899. Several family friends appearing in Thamm's portraits were Civil War veterans. Some families documented by Thamm include the Charles Deininger family; George W. Paul and his family; William H. Copeland and his family; and Fredrick C. Kunle and his family. Many of these images include scenes with children posed with their toys and dolls; others include the family's home or porch, carefully staged. The collection also contains images photographed by Clara Thamm, typically of her parents, Charles and Susanna Thamm.

Thamm's photographs include scenes of railroads, trains, mills, bridges, roads, water works, and manufacturing companies, documenting technological innovations from the turn of the twentieth century. Areas represented include Reading, Bristol, Landisville, and Philadelphia.

The collection includes Thamm's captions (when known) as well as Earl Dotter's inventory of the photographs. Dotter researched Thamm extensively as he assembled his collection, and many images' locations and individuals have been identified. Image titles appearing within this collection were either originally created by Charles Thamm, or were later assigned by Earl Dotter. Dotter assigned most images a CT number (for example, CT1, CT2, etc.) which he used when digitizing the glass plate negatives and prints. When present, an image's CT number is included in its description. Multiple versions may exist of each image. Some digital CT images have no corresponding physical print or negative. Original glass negative sleeves with Thamm's captions are included in the collection. Due to their poor condition, they have been separated from the original negatives in order to preserve the image on the glass negatives. Use the CT number recorded on the sleeve to match the sleeve with its corresponding image. Most captions on the sleeve match the title of the image appearing in the inventory.

Biographical/Historical

Charles G. A. Thamm (1849-1924) was an artist, inventor, engraver, and photographer born in Breslau, Germany. His family immigrated to the United States shortly before the American Civil War, and settled in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Charles attended Philadelphia's Central High School, graduating 1869, and began working for the Landreth Seed Catalog Company (now D. Landreth and Co.). He remained with the company for the next thirty years. By 1896, he had become a photographer and his photography was used to illustrate some of the company's seed catalogs. He also invented some seed packing machinery, patented in the 1890s. Thamm retired from Landreth Seed Catalog Company in 1903.

Charles Thamm's family included his wife, Susanna Melvina Loeser Thamm (1844-1934), and their daughter Clara Melvina Thamm (1882-1958). Clara attended Spring Garden Institute in Philadelphia and became a certified art and music instructor in 1900. In 1904, Clara married John Christian Dotter Sr. and changed her name to Clara Melvina Dotter.

Clara Dotter was Earl Dotter's grandmother. Earl Dotter was born in 1943 and recalls spending time with his grandmother as a child. In his illustrated biography, Charles G. A. Thamm: Artist Copper Plate Engraver, Inventor and Photographer, Earl Dotter writes: "For me, to see the creative work of my great grandfather, then see how my grandmother followed him with her own artistic path, represented a major inspiration to me as another creative in the family. I ultimately found my way as an Occupational Photojournalist, seeing the artistry my great grandfather and grandmother accomplished, two generations before me."

Arrangement

Collection is arranged into three series: Charles G. A. Thamm's original prints and negatives, plus raw digital scans of those images; Earl Dotter's adjusted digital images of Thamm's photographs and other artifacts; and Earl Dotter's research and other artifacts from Thamm and his family.

Collection Inventory

Earl Dotter's digital images of Charles Thamm's photographs and artifacts

Scope and Contents

This series contains Earl Dotter's digitized and adjusted scans of his collection of Charles Thamm's family and professional photographs. Dotter's interactions with the scanned images include color corrections, grayscale editing, and other editing choices drawing on his expertise as a professional photographer.

Earl Dotter assigned titles and numbers (CT1, CT2, etc.) to each image. Many titles reflect the names and locations of the people or scenes present in the photograph. The un-altered original images are present as raw digital files and as original negatives and prints in the Charles G. A. Thamm Original Photographs series.

This series also contains Dotter's digital photographs of some of Thamm's artifacts, such as his cameras, which Dotter inherited or acquired as part of his research into his family's history and photography legacy.

Access note. Some materials in this collection are electronic records that require special equipment. Contact Research Services with questions.

Digitized and adjusted Charles Thamm photographs

Scope and Contents

Earl Dotter digitized and restored many of Charles Thamm's original negatives and prints, and in doing so created new works of adjusted digital images which are included in this subseries. Dotter's titles and CT numbers are present. Dotter's adjustments included color corrections, digital repair of cracked or faded glass plate negatives or prints, and enhancements or cropping. He explained the motivation and part of his process in his illustrated biography, Charles G. A. Thamm: Artist, Copper Plate Engraver, Inventor and Photographer, also present in this collection.

Researchers interested in the original image should review the Charles G. A. Thamm Original Photographs series, which contains unaltered digital raw scans as well as original negatives and photograph prints from Thamm.

Charles G. A. Thamm original photographs, 1890s-1910s

Physical Description: 9 boxes

Scope and Contents

This series contains original negatives, prints, albums, and unaltered digital scans of Charles G. A. Thamm's photographs. There are also original photographs taken by Thamm's daughter, Clara Thamm, intermixed within this set. The majority of these images are titled and numbered by Earl Dotter, and searching the CT number ("CT1", for example) will cross-locate all versions of that image present within this collection.

Earl Dotter digitized Thamm's images prior to the collection being acquired by Rubenstein Library. Digital "raw" scans are inventoried in this series with Dotter's assigned CT number and his title information. Many titles include the names of the people present and the locations or subjects of the image.

Along with the raw digital images, the series contains a selection of the Thamm family's original prints and glass plate negatives collected by Dotter. Not every raw digital scan has a corresponding glass plate negative or print: following the death of Dotter's great aunt, the Thamm archives (originally stored in her home) were divided up and auctioned, and Dotter was not able to acquire the entire set. He later acquired some of the digital scans from other collectors who purchased the original negatives.

Glass plate negatives in this collection range in size: the majority measure either 3.5x3.5 inches or 5x7 inches.

Photographic prints also range in size. If a solo physical print includes a CT number, that has been itemized alongside the digital image in the series inventory. Other prints are present which lack CT numbers or title information. These are grouped into folders titled "various prints."

Thamm's two family albums also contain prints, many which correspond to glass plate negatives in this same series. Some of the album prints were Dotter's original source used when making his digital scans. Some album prints have Dotter's captions and CT numbers assigned, and that has been included in this collection guide, if known.

Albums and untitled loose prints, 1890s-1910s

Scope and Contents

This subseries contains original Thamm family albums and prints. Within the albums there are an assortment of images, some with CT numbers applied which can be used to identify Dotter's titles. The loose prints in this subseries do not have CT numbers. These prints often duplicate negatives present in the collection which are inventoried in the Digital Raw Scans, Titled Prints, and Titled Glass Plate Negatives subseries.

Family photograph album (Album 1),
1890s-1910s

Box 2

Physical Description: 8 folders 1 unbound album, housed in 8 folders

Scope and Contents

Album boards and pages with mounted 5x7 and 4x5 prints, including handwritten captions. Contents include photographs of Thamm's family and friends; scenery, gardens, farms, and landscapes in Pennsylvania; some images of Philadelphia, including Fairmount Park; Wissahickon River mills and bridges; and other assorted structures. Most images have CT numbers, meaning they have been scanned by Earl Dotter. Many have corresponding glass plate negatives inventoried in the Digital Raw Scans, Original Prints, and Original Negatives subseries.

When first acquired, Earl Dotter's notes about whether items were scanned (with corresponding CT numbers) or not scanned were recorded in the album via post-it notes. These adhesives have been removed by the library staff and pencil annotations added to the album's pages to document Dotter's process. Not all images have additional notes.

Scope and Contents

This subseries contains Thamm's images in multiple formats: glass plate negatives, prints, and digital scans. The images have been inventoried with CT numbers by Dotter, and titles are supplied by Dotter. Some images exist only as digital scans -- the original negatives or prints were not acquired by Rubenstein Library. Other images exist as scans, negatives, or prints (or sometimes as all three.)

Dotter created these raw scans ahead of acquisition by Rubenstein Library. He then altered or adjusted the images; those adjusted images are inventoried and are requestable in the Earl Dotter's Digital Images of Charles Thamm's Photographs and Artifacts series.
