Background

Scope and Content

The Duke-Durham Neighborhood Partnership Records contain detailed information on the programs and initiatives sponsored by the Duke Durham Neighborhood Partnership between 2000 and 2012. The collection contains planning documents, correspondence, notes and other materials related to both individual projects, as well as long-term programs such as the John Hope Franklin Youth Scholars program and collaborations with Durham Public Schools and Walltown Neighborhood Ministries. The collection also includes administrative materials employed by Duke-Durham Neighborhood Partnership committees and staff members including meeting minutes, background research, program evaluations and staff correspondence.

Biographical/Historical

The Duke-Durham Neighborhood Partnership is a division of the Office of Durham & Regional Affairs dedicated to working with the twelve Durham neighborhoods surrounding the Duke Campus. The program was established in the mid-1990's under the leadership of Duke President Nannerl Keohane after an extensive review of similar community relations projects undertaken at similar colleges and universities. The Duke-Durham Neighborhood Partnership works with residents within surrounding communities on projects including education, youth outreach, affordable housing and health care. DDNP also seeks to increase ties between Duke University students and Durham through programs such as the Duke-Durham Engage Program. Currently, DDNP continues its work within the Duke Office of Durham and Community Affairs and is part of an expanded Housing and Infrastructure focus.
