Summary

Collection Title:

School of Law records, 1914-2010s

Creator:

Duke University. School of Law

Abstract:

The School of Law dates its origins as far back as 1850. The school experienced many organizational changes and several temporary closures in its early years before re-establishing itself as the School of Law in 1904. This collection includes papers of deans of the law school in 1930 and continuing forward. Also included are materials related to the law school's publications, the Duke Bar Association, legal research centers, the law library, Richard Nixon's time as a student at the law school and general administrative files dating back to 1914.

Background

Scope and Content

This collection includes papers of the deans of the School of Law starting in 1930. This material covers a wide range of information relating to the daily operations of the law school and includes: general correspondence, financial documents, annual reports, recruitment files, clerkship files, clippings, subject files, meeting minutes, development materials, and general office files. The collection also includes information about the various law school journals and publications edited and created by both students and faculty. Administrative files date back to 1914 and include: blank exams, financial documents, correspondence, placement bulletins, and other general files. Topics include legal education, Richard Nixon, administration, faculty, students, alumni, university presidents and administrators, the American Bar Association, the American Association of Law Schools, the school's Legal Aid Clinic, and law library.

Accession UA2024-0034 contains records from the School of Law's Office of Alumni and Development, chiefly agendas and minutes from Board of Visitor and Law Alumni Association meetings.

Biographical/Historical

Lectures on law began as early as 1850 at Trinity Colleges in Randolph County. In 1865, a Law Department was established, and in 1868, the School of Law opened later closing in 1882. The school would experience many organizational changes and several temporary closures in its early years. After one of these temporary closures, the School of Law reopened in 1904 with the help of an endowment established by James Buchanan Duke and Benjamin Newton Duke. More details about the history of the law school can be found on their website here: <http://www.law.duke.edu/history/timeline>

Dean Walter E. Dellinger III (Acting Dean), 1974-1978, undated.

Scope and Contents note

Walter E. Dellinger served as acting dean between 1976-1978. Prior to becoming acting dean, Dellinger was the associate dean of the law school. Some documents in this subseries are likely from his time as associate dean.

There is also some overlap between the papers of Dean Dellinger and Dean Carrington.

Dean Paul Carrington, 1968-1989, bulk 1978-1988, undated.

Scope and Contents note

Paul Carrington was dean of the law school from 1978 to 1988. This material is restricted for 25 years from date of origin. Contact research services for more information. Also, there is some overlap between Dean Carrington and Dean Dellinger's papers so other Carrington related material may be found in the Dellinger subseries.

Access Restrictions:

Access restricted. Some materials include student records. In accordance with the Family Education Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 as amended, Duke University permits students to inspect their education records and limits the disclosure of personally identifiable information from education records. Contact Research Services for more information.

Access restricted. Some materials are personnel records. Records, such as search committee files or others pertaining to employment where individuals are identified, are closed for 70 years.

Access restricted. Some materials contain university development records. Materials related to individual fundraising prospects are restricted for 70 years. Contact Research Services for more information.
