Background

Scope and Content

Materials in the collection include administrative records, correspondence, curricula, reports, memoranda, minutes, course schedules, statistics, handbooks, newsletters, financial information, photographs, programs, scrapbooks, and other materials from the Office of Black Affairs, the Office of Minority Affairs, the Office of Intercultural Affairs, and the Center for Multicultural Affairs. Contains administrative files, audiovisual and digital materials, and photographs from the Center of Multicultural Affairs related to its work with Duke student groups including Black Student Alliance and Mi Gente.

Biographical/Historical

The Center for Multicultural Affairs began as the Office of Black Affairs in 1969 to address the needs of the African American student population at Duke University. The Office of Black Affairs was created soon after the Afro-American Society students led a Black student takeover of the Allen Building to spark University action on the concerns of Black students. The core mission of the Office of Black Affairs was to provide outreach to Black students to facilitate rapid involvement with the university community through mentorship programs, financial aid, academic counseling and tutoring, and the development of Black Studies courses. The Summer Transitional Program (STP) was one of the ten demands students made to the University after the Allen Building occupied. STP was designed as an Office of Black Affairs program to facilitate the students' transition from the secondary level to the demands of the university level. With the original goal of decreasing the attrition rate of Black students by raising the level of academic performance and introducing the students to the social structures of Duke University. In the early 1970's, the focus of STP changed to assist all students in their transition to university life.

Under some controversy, the Office of Black Affairs was changed to the Office of Minority Affairs in 1978. While the name had changed, the core mission of the office remained the same, which was to provide an organizational structure through which Black participation in the University and local communities obtained the greatest degree of effectiveness.

In 1993, the Office of Minority Affairs was renamed the Office of Intercultural Affairs. As the Office of Intercultural Affairs the mission became focused on identifying needs and assisting with changes in the Duke University community which promoted growth and development for African American, Asian American, Latino American, and Native American students.

In 2002, the Office of Intercultural Affairs became the Center for Multicultural Affairs (CMA) with a mission to foster a welcoming environment, to support all students in becoming engaged members of the Duke community, and to promote community engagement and learning across identities, perspectives, and lived experiences.
